In this Blueberry Centennial Year, we look at another putative claim to the origins of the blueberry industry. Visitors to Whitesbog have occasionally asked about the Alloway Memorial Stone, a large granite marker along an unnamed dirt road near Speedwell that purports to mark the place where the blueberry industry began. There is little information to be found regarding the Alloway Memorial Stone in casual searches, so we called on Ted Gordon, our font of knowledge for Pine Barrens history, to tell us the story. – ed.-

In the deep silence of the regenerating forest at Friendship rests a massive block of granite bearing the following moving inscription: The cultivated blueberry industry started in the New Jersey Pinelands on this site. James Garfield Alloway established one of the world’s first blueberry farms. Not only was it one of the first but for many years it was one of the most productive. // The hard work of James Garfield Alloway, his wife, Anna Shinske (Choroczynski) Alloway, and his son, Mark Andrew Alloway made this piece of Pinelands a garden spot. Their pioneering efforts helped establish blueberry cultivation. // This monument is dedicated to their memory by James Garfield De Marco. Now abandoned and returning to forest, the Alloway farm belongs to the State of New Jersey. // Erected March 28, 1986.

About 2.4 miles west of the Lee Brothers’ cranberry bogs at historic Speedwell in Burlington County along Route 563 south of Chatsworth rest the depressing, crumbling, iron stone foundations of what was once the remote and peaceful hamlet of Friendship. Here during the second half of the 19th century, the Wills brothers, Henry, John, and Joseph, owned in partnership a parcel of land of about 1200 acres at Friendship Neck. They visited this tract infrequently during autumn to gather wild cranberries and do a little hunting. Joseph Evans and his brother-in-law Joshua S. Wills (son of Henry) shared a passionate desire to grow cranberries. In 1868, after favorable negotiations with their relatives to obtain this vast acreage, these two friends immediately commenced the growing of cranberries in cultivated beds (“bogs”) at this remote site. They gathered and transplanted wild vines that were growing in meadows that bordered small feeder streamlets of the Tulpehocken Creek, a tributary of the West Branch of the Wading River. They called their new venture Evans & Wills.1

Buildings were erected immediately and more bogs were set out as an 810 acre tract was acquired to the north in 1893.2 It is likely that the vast sorting/packing house at Friendship was constructed during this era. Although I have researched numerous documents pertaining to the Evans & Wills estate, (continued on page 2)
I have yet to encounter specific information pertaining to the erection of homes and other structures here (Fig. 1).

Although none of the members of the Evans and Wills families ever established permanent residence at Friendship, three generations of Alloways lived here, while faithfully serving the company in various managerial capacities. The “Alloway House,” with its green clapboards, was perpetually occupied by Alloways, as I would learn from the late Frank Yates, a foreman who toiled and lived on the farm for many years (Fig. 2). Frank recalled that during the latter years, the other five houses, including a one-room school house and a long pickers’ shanty, were occupied by many different residents for relatively short periods of time. When I began my photographic documentation of the hamlet in 1971, both the Alloway House and a large house at the intersection of Speedwell Road and Hawkins Bridge Road had already been reduced to cellar holes (Fig. 3-4).

Fig. 2. Three generations of Alloways resided in this house along the west side of East Sandy Ridge Road (aka Speedwell-Hawkins Bridge Road) in the hamlet of Friendship. Serving as managers of the Evans & Wills farm during their respective terms were Mark Alloway (b.1858-d.1928), his son James Garfield Alloway (b.1880-d.1951), and his son Mark Andrew Alloway (b.1911-d.1976). Fig. 3. Village view, looking northeast across the Alloway House cellar hole at the store/living quarters/recreation hall, both fronting East Sandy Ridge Road (aka Friendship-Hawks’ Bridge Road). The brown house in the distance directly along Speedwell Road was still occupied on July 17, 1975, date of this photo. Photo credit, T. Gordon.

Fig. 4. Village view similar to that in Fig.3 except that the angle is greater to the right. In the foreground is the Alloway cellar hole. Clearly visible is East Sandy Ridge Road with the ruins of the store across the road. The little house to the left, concealed by the intact store in Fig. 3, was referred to as the "bungalow" or office by the late Francis W. Sharpless and the late Albert "Andy" Andrews, who were stockholders and officers in Evans & Wills, Inc. and were involved in management of this farm. Both occasionally stayed in this building. During more recent times it served as a residence for laborers. It was the last house standing in the village. By 1980, the entire hamlet of Friendship lay in complete ruin. Photo credit, T. Gordon, July 17, 1975.
The collaborative work of Elizabeth White and Frederick Coville produced its first crop of cultivated blueberries in 1916 at Whitesbog, NJ. For the next 10 years, White promoted the sale of seedlings from six hybrids to encourage local farmers to get involved in the fledgling industry. By 1927 there were enough growers to warrant the establishment of the Blueberry Cooperative. In 1931, Evans & Wills and Garfield Alloway joined the Coop. The extent of experimentation by these three men with cultivation of wild blueberry bushes, prior to 1927, has not been ascertained. A Burlington County deed reveals that Garfield Alloway was granted 65 acres of land in the 1930s by Evans & Wills which was carved out of their Friendship holdings (Fig. 5). This enabled Garfield and his son, Mark Andrew, to participate in the blueberry industry. Later, Mark’s son, Gary, assisted his father at various intervals in blueberry cultivation and in nursery work that involved the crafting (budding) of blueberry plants for sale.

In 1988, I learned from Francis Wills Sharpless, a long-time manager of all the Evans & Wills farms, that the two families had decided to divide their properties. Francis (a Wills heir) received the Quoexen bogs in Medford; the Evans heirs, the Friendship and the Willow Farms. Soon, stockholder Albert T. Andrews, Jr. bought the Friendship property and in February 1962 sold it to Friendship Forest Lakes, Inc., owned by a New York land speculator. In June 1981, the latter sold the 2051.85 acres to the State, which annexed it to the Wharton State Forest.

In December 1970, when Mark Andrew Alloway became weary of farming, he sold the Alloway farm to J. Garfield De Marco. Thirteen years later, on April 23, 1983, De Marco sold this once productive tract to the State, with whom he negotiated for the right to grace that precious parcel of land with a lasting memorial to the Alloways (cover figure).

Fig. 5. Outlined on this image is the Alloway parcel of land (65 acres) granted to Garfield Alloway by Evans & Wills for producing his own blueberries and developing a nursery to sell blueberry plants. Four buildings related to these activities were located in the vicinity of the monument dedicated to the Alloways by J. Garfield De Marco. In the upper right is a 3.086 acre tract sold by Alloway to the Pioneer Sportsman Club of Pitman in 1958. The cleared area in the upper left is the location of the hamlet of Friendship. The Yates, now Kasper parcel is privately owned. Sketch comes courtesy of Guy Thompson, based on Burlington County deeds and surveys.
Imagine activities and interests that bring you great joy. Then focus on a location so full of history, culture, and gorgeous natural scenery that you have a hard time deciding which activity you’d like to pursue first. Add to that, kind and generous people with the same ideals, who are so much fun to spend time with, that you call them friends. This is typical of the “conundrum” that I find myself facing when I travel to Whitesbog Village to dedicate my time as a volunteer. Aside from my obvious enjoyment of the area, what appeals to me most about being a volunteer at Whitesbog are the countless opportunities which allow me to contribute to this site. From art projects to botanic & gardening activities, from trail work to historic research, from guiding tours to answering public queries... there are never-ending possibilities for the person or group who find themselves with a desire to share their time.

Like most of you, my life is busy and full of obligations and commitments. When the need to unwind, yet remain productive rolls around, I find myself headed to Whitesbog Village. Personally I relish that it is located off-the beaten path. Here is a place where the world moves along at a quiet pace. But don’t get the wrong idea. The staff and Committee members (also volunteers!) at Whitesbog remain bustling behind the scenes; their daily accomplishments are an amazing feat. From planning festivals/activities, promoting events, writing grants and maintaining the buildings you enjoy on your visits, these folks provide smooth running of the site for the thousands of yearly visitors who enjoy its relaxing beauty. The volunteers, those like you and I, provide much appreciated support and enhance the site with additional activities for the visiting public.

Through the dedication of our volunteers Whitesbog provides the public with garden tours, bird walks, and moonlight hikes. There are Living History events, historic tours, and research projects to work on. Items need to be built, fixed, and updated. Creation of posters and signs. Maintenance of website features and calendars. Trails need to be re-blazed, village maps revised, public information and media contacts maintained. There is always a demand for basic computer skills, as well as organizing files & village supplies. Even a monthly visit from a handyperson to cover basic small repairs. Greatly appreciated are people to staff buildings and engage the public in conversation, providing a much needed personal connection to the site. Many of our volunteers arrived and have remained for the long term because of fellow volunteers they have met here and the connection that they gained to the site through sharing stories and time spent together. It is truly an enjoyable group of people who make Whitesbog a special place for visitors and volunteers alike.

So consider your interests or your desire to participate with us here at Whitesbog. If your hobbies include painting or drawing, would you consider sitting on the porch of the Gallery with a sketch pad or an easel so that building could remain open for an afternoon? Are you fascinated with the history of south jersey and want to share that passion with the public through living history tours? Want to share some writing expertise by producing press releases, event information, flyers? Handy?... build some birdhouses! Fascinated with bugs?...lead a “Critter Crawl”. And now with our two, newly renovated buildings we are able to support small workshops & classes! What would you like to share? You name it, we have a place for you to share your knowledge and skills. The choice is yours and we welcome your involvement in a pleasant, low-key setting. Don’t be hesitant to reach out or just show up to chat with us. We are a casual group who would love to have you join in the fun!

The first Saturday of each month is Volunteer Work Day at Whitesbog. It is the one day each month when you will see volunteers, en masse throughout the village, engaged in many activities. We traditionally work for a few hours in the morning, gather for a provided lunch at the General Store, and then finish the afternoon with a couple of additional hours. However, it’s not unusual to see most of us milling about or relaxing until later in the afternoon and often staying if there is a Saturday evening event! The site is comfortable and accommodating for all of our volunteers.
The Mission of the Trust is to restore, protect and enhance historic Whitesbog Village, in order to preserve the White family legacy and to inspire audiences of all ages to experience:
- the origins and innovations of cranberry and blueberry cultivation
- the rich culture and unique ecology of the New Jersey Pine Barrens.

Allison Pierson, our Director, and her team create an inviting atmosphere for every person who comes down the road to visit. Your contribution of time and skills never go unappreciated. I promise when you leave for the day, you will feel as if your involvement was well worth the time you spent here.

Like many not-for-profit organizations that depend on the graciousness of volunteers, there is also the need to maintain support through membership. For obvious financial reasons as well as the ability to qualify for grants, membership in The Whitesbog Preservation Trust is an integral part to the existence of both the Village and the activities which are provided there. There are SEVEN different levels of membership and two levels of Artist/Gallery membership available! Membership personally connects you to the mission of the Trust which is committed to restoration, protection and enhancement of the historic culture and natural environment of the site. Support has always been critical to our existence, now it has been made easy for you to join us.

Rare places such as Whitesbog Village make it hard not to fall in love with the New Jersey Pine Barrens or at the least, gain a fresh sense of wonder of the offerings that lie along the white sand roads, the slow moving dark streams, the quiet whispers of the tree tops. Whitesbog allows you to immerse yourself in the many facets of south jersey history and the important roles that locations such as Whitesbog played in the development of U.S. agriculture. Events of local and regional history also provide additional flair to New Jersey’s ever changing growth. Through membership and volunteerism at Whitesbog I have found a means of sharing my experiences and contributing to the mission of the site, all while embracing the sanctuary of this precious area. I invite you to spend an afternoon with us to see why.
